What we'll be doing:

This project is an adaptation of the following project found on Pinterest:

1. You should have 4 Macrame cords that are all roughly the same length. Fold all the cords in half and tie a knot at the top leaving a 1-2 inch space. This will be the hanger part.
2. If you can, hang the cord on a cabinet door or on something that will allow you to work with it hanging-it is easier this way.
3. Take any two cords and tie a knot about 5 inches down. Do this with the other cords so you have 4 knots. Make the knots an even length all the way around.
4. About 2 or 3 inches down, take 2 of the knots you just made and grab 1 cord from each one of those knots and tie those cords together with another knot.
5. Go all the way around until you have 4 knots. Again, make the knots an even length all the way around. This will be your second row of knots and you will see the hanger start forming.
6. Follow step 5 to make a third row of knots.
7. Put your jar in the hanger to make sure it fits. If it doesn't, then just adjust your knots a bit by stretching them out.
8. Once you have your jar nice and snug in the hanger, make a giant knot at the bottom so that it does not fall out. You should have extra cord at the bottom that you can cut to make all the cords an even length. You're done!!
