Hannah wakes up one day to a radio silent Houston and panics until she finds there is one person left, Leo Sterling. She has always had a crush on him and is overjoyed to know that she is not alone in this horrifying apocalyptic world. Hannah is a perfectionist ballet dancer while Leo is a carefree musician, but they find that when all is taken away from them, their true personalities shine through. Through their harrowing experiences together, they grow closer and realize what truly brings them happiness in life. Hannah and Leo must also work through the overwhelming fear that everyone and everything they love could be gone forever.

What drew you to this book?

One thing that really drew me to this book was that the idea of the whole world being deserted really intrigued me. I was very curious to see how the two characters would handle this situation of only having each other. Another thing that drew me to this book was that the main character is a ballet dancer, and I am too. So, I really enjoyed all the references to dance in this book.

Did it remind you of something that you've previously read?

This reminded me a lot of the book "Kind of a Big Deal" because in both stories the main character is transported into a fantasy world where they face struggles. When both characters return back to reality, they have a realization about their life that was made because of being in the scenario where all sense of reality is taken away. The true causes of happiness and fulfillment shine through when the distractions of everyday life are gone.

To whom would you recommend this book?

"You and Me at the End of the World" by Brianna Bourne would be perfect for anyone who is looking for a book that is set in an apocalyptic world and wants some romance incorporated into the story. Also, if you enjoy reading suspense filled stories, this book is for you because it always keeps you guessing.

Overall, did you like it and would you recommend it to others?

Overall, I would highly recommend this book to others. The one thing I loved most about this book was how the contrast of Leo and Hannah's personalities brought them together throughout the story. It was very enjoyable to watch how they connected through the hardship of having all they loved be gone. Hannah and Leo are both very likable characters and that is very important to me in a book. I liked all the twists and turns of the plot that kept me on my toes. The one part of this book I did not enjoy was there was a huge twist at the end and it was not what I was hoping and expecting, so that disappointed me. Otherwise, I found this book very enjoyable.

Anything else that you would like to add to this review? What made you choose it? Did you like the cover? Was it recommended to you? Did you find it at the library?

This book was recommended to me based on books I had read that were similar to it. Also, the cover and title really intrigued me to find out what it was about. I found this book on Sails and read it with my kindle.
