Wes and Corey hate everything. In fact they cannot find anything they can't hate on. When they are sent to jazz camp, Wes and Cory hate it with much prejudice. Fortunately for them, so does a girl named Ash. So, like what any normal teenager would do, they run away from jazz camp and start their own band and go on tour. But, how would they make music that doesn't sound like trash? That question is answered through a series of hilarious, interesting, and questionable events.

What drew you to this book?

The storyline drew me to this book because of how unique these characters are in this book.

Did it remind you of something that you've previously read?

This book didn't remind me of anything that I have read in the past. However, this book was an experience that changed my life.

To whom would you recommend this book?

I would recommend this book to anyone that love coming of age stories in general. There are also a few plot twists too.

Overall, did you like it and would you recommend it to others?

I like the book. However, it was not necessarily my cup of tea. Having said, I will not recommend this book to others because some of the subjects are a bit questionable.

Anything else that you would like to add to this review? What made you choose it? Did you like the cover? Was it recommended to you? Did you find it at the library?

I originally chose this book because at that time I was in a band so it was interesting to me. I found this book in the library in the YA section.
